Visitor restrictions lifted at Salina Regional Health Center

(March 31, 2015) – Due to a recent decline in influenza activity, Salina Regional Health Center announced today that it is lifting its visitor restrictions put in place January 5 to protect patients, visitors and employees from the spread of influenza. Visitors had been limited to immediate family members and clergy only. Infants and small children were discouraged from visiting.

While the hospital is returning to its normal visitor guidelines, there are still cases of influenza and influenza-like illness within the region. The hospital requests anyone feeling ill or having any signs or symptoms of the flu not visit patients. Symptoms include cough, runny nose, fever, sore throat, muscle aches or fatigue. Any visitor who is noted to have flu-like symptoms will be given a mask and discouraged from visiting.
